It's 2016 All Over Again¹

The So-Called Liberal Media is making a horserace out of what should be a slam-dunk by obsessing on inflation and Biden's age while ignoring what has been a historic presidency.

Biden has done far more than help the country recover from the economic and moral train wreck that was the Trump presidency. He is the first president in four decades to effectively challenge Reagan's malignant trickle-down economics. He's accomplished more with less than any of his predecessors.

That's because his age has been an asset rather than a liability. When elected, he'd been around the block much longer than Bill Clinton and Barack Obama had been when elected, and it has shown in his ability to manage Republicans in a manner reminiscent of the way Reagan managed Democrats.

Biden's "middle out, bottom up" economy is not a new idea. It formed the basis of FDR's New Deal, a social contract that Republican as well as Democratic presidents followed for half a century before being replaced by Reagan's Raw Deal. It created a middle class that was once the envy of the world.

If the race is between Biden and Trump, it is a no-brainer. New Deal or Raw Deal? Continue to plunder workers (some $50 trillion has been transferred from the bottom 90% to the top 1%) or end the Class War with reparations? Resurrect our democracy or give up on the grand experiment that was America?
